Forecast for Monday 09 Nov 2020

Weather: Cloud will break up more in the early hours with some clear spells around overnight and some sunshine around in the morning though still some patchy low cloud clinging to some of the hills especially the Trossachs and Arran. Cloud then increasing with some patchy rain developing in the afternoon and evening.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 70% in morning with most northern summits clear but some hill fog patches in south then falling 40% in north and 20% in south with more in the way of low cloud. Some of the highest tops in the north may stay above the main low cloud layer.

Visibility: Mainly good in the morning away from the cloud but falling moderate, perhaps occasionally poor in the duller damper weather.
